

Dental X-Ray Policy

We use digital radiography to minimize radiation exposure.

Bitewing X-rays are typically taken once per year for adults with low cavity risk.

A full-mouth series or panoramic image is taken every 3–5 years, or sooner if clinically needed.

Lead aprons and thyroid collars are available; digital sensors already reduce dose substantially.

Pregnant patients: elective X-rays are deferred when possible; urgent diagnostic images use shielding.

You may decline X-rays, but diagnosis and treatment planning may be limited without them.
